There were a few problems in this class:
The best bird benched dropped both its primary tail feathers during judging.
Another bird did not conform to the Standard so it was another disqualification. First is a nice cock with good width. Would have liked better body colour but it has the correct tail and flight colours and variety content is very important.

This was an interesting class. Initially the bird in cage A was put into third placing but it had an ability to over show and on closer examination, we noticed the front toe was twisted on the left foot and the rear toe did not grip the perch at all.

Although a nice bird it had to be disqualified – this bird belonged to South Australia. The first bird has better deportment and better width and is a top bird.

This variety has improved a lot. The first three birds are lovely examples. First is a Spangle Grey, a long bird, good depth of mask. Half to three quarter crest with a smaller one at the back which did not spoil the outline of the bird. Presented in beautiful condition. Carries one darker flight which was slightly penalized.

Second, a cobalt, with magnificent mask and spots, lovely crest, good length but not as thick in the shoulders and head.

Third is thicker set than first and second, but shorter. Again good mask and spots. After that the class tapered off in quality.

A very strong class: First place getter is a very strong bird with good top end and deportment. She was challenged with the flecking but still was far enough ahead to win.
